Type of Organization: Family Services

Mission Statement: Since our inception in 1846, Virginia Home for Boys and Girls (VHBG) has helped thousands of children with emotional and behavioral health needs from across Virginia. Because most of the children we serve have faced some sort of trauma in their young lives, they often have social, emotional, behavioral, and academic barriers to succeeding. We offer three beneficial services that incorporate the teaching of coping skills: 1) group services, 2) a K-12 specialized school called the John G. Wood School, and 3) a therapeutic resource center. Our approach involves a family atmosphere which is important to helping children heal and restores hope to them and their families who then find the courage to thrive. VHBG is the only certified Teaching-Family Model site in the Commonwealth of Virginia (...See Nonprofit Portrait for more information)

Impact Statement: All VHBG programs strive to provide youth and families a place to build safe and supportive relationships, to help them find hope and healing, and to help them develop lifelong skills that will give them the confidence to believe in their future. Across all programs, 100% of survey respondents claimed satisfaction with services.

GROUP CARE SERVICES:

Success of a youth is measured independently and may look and feel very different for each youth involved. For some this might mean that 80% of his or her Service Plan goals were achieved/mastered. For another youth this might mean that significant family progress was made and the youth can safely return home. In all cases, we've helped determine what the next level of care a child needs to continue on their (...See Nonprofit Portrait for more information)
